THREE CHIMNEYS
The Idea is Excellence.

SKY MESA Colt Goes for 4th Win in 5 Starts in Sausalito S.

CURLIN TO LANE'S END

Curlin (Smart Strike--Sherriff's Deputy, by Deputy Minister), the 2007 Horse of the Year and North America's all-time leading earner, will stand the 2009 season at Lane's End for a fee of $75,000, it was announced yesterday. "He is one of the best examples of the breed--fast, strong, and durable," said Curlin's majority owner Jess Jackson. "I predict he will make a substantial contribution to our sport through his gene pool, and I am looking forward to seeing his foals compete and possibly exceed his unequaled race record." At Lane's End, Curlin will join his sire Smart Strike (Mr. Prospector), who was North America's leading sire by earnings in 2007 and also tops the list so far in 2008. "The Jacksons are due great credit for allowing our sport to enjoy this great champion as a four-year-old," said Will Farish, owner of Lane's End. "Many would have retired him after winning the Breeders' Cup Classic and Horse of the Year honors as a three-year-old. Curlin's performance on the track, his pedigree and his conformation make him the most exciting sire prospect to retire in many years. We are honored to have him join his champion sire Smart Strike at Lane's End." Curlin's second straight win in this year's GI Jockey Club Gold Cup propelled him past Cigar (Palace Music) on the all-time North American earnings list. He heads to the breeding shed with a record of 16-11-2-2 and earnings of $10,501,800.

Sarah K Andrew

Sarah K Andrew

Of his superstar, trainer Steve Asmussen said, "Curlin made his mark in the history books in so many ways: as a Classic winner, as a colt who traveled to Dubai and captured the World Cup, and who returned to take three more Grade I races and tally record earnings. His physical and mental attitude is unparalleled, and he retires perfectly sound."

GEORGE WASHINGTON FOAL TOPS GOFFS

The most eagerly anticipated offering of Goffs 2008 November Foal Sale ultimately proved the star attraction. The sole representative of the ill-fated George Washington (Ire) topped yesterday's proceedings, bringing €280,000 as trade moved up a notch at the Co. Kildare venue. Offered on behalf of breeder Stefano Luciani by the Irish National Stud as Hip 1245, the February-foaled bay filly, a half-sister to the 2002 G3 Prix Penelope victress Ombre Legere (Ire), was eventually knocked down to Glidawn Stud's Ger Burke. Burke gave immediate indication of her future, saying, "We specialise in pinhooking well-bred fillies, and she's a unique filly by a unique horse. She was a really, really good filly and she was our pick of the week. Her pedigree alone reads very well--she's a half-sister to a filly who was placed in a Group 1 and produced a French Derby second in Best Name. We're delighted to get her and she's been bought for resale." No lot had broken through the six-figure barrier in the previous four sessions of the sale, but that mark was breached 11 times as trade received a welcome boost.

Silver medal honours at Goffs yesterday went to Silfield Bloodstock's Hip 1191, a Dalakhani (Ire) colt, who went the way of Camas Park for €190,000.

"Times are tough, but he was a standout colt, and let's keep our fingers crossed for next year," commented Camas Park's Timmy Hyde about the half-brother to 2002 G2 King Edward S. hero Balakheri (Ire) (Theatrical {Ire}). "He's from a very good family, too," he added. Third place on the podium went to another Dalakhani offering, Jockey Hall Stud's Hip 1235, a filly who was purchased by

Balakheri woodfieldfarmstud.com

Rathmoyle Export for €165,000. Continuing the healthy trend an hour later was Ballylinch Stud's Hip 1268, who went the way of BBA Ireland for €130,000. The April-foaled Shamardal colt is a half-brother to Grade II winner Hoh Buzzard (Ire) (Alhaarth {Ire}) and the G1 July Cup runner-up Ashdown Express (Ire) (Ashkalani {Ire}).

Business As Usual...

Commenting at the conclusion of business, Goffs Chief Executive Henry Beeby said, "What can I say that hasn't already been said by every sales company chief over the last few months? Obviously, we are disappointed with the results, as the bare figures do not make happy reading across the board. However, what they do not show is that all the pinhookers have stated that it has been as hard as ever to buy the 'nice foals,' and today's trade in particular has borne out that view. The bloodstock industry, and Goffs, has enjoyed unprecedented and sustained growth and buoyancy in recent years, often defying trends elsewhere, but that could not go on forever. Whether the drops we are seeing would have been as severe if we had only had to deal with the effects of overproduction or the global economic climate rather than both at the same time is anyone's guess. Maybe no one was able to predict what has happened in the financial world, but many have expressed concern about the increasing numbers of Thoroughbreds for some time, and it seems to be generally accepted that there are just too many horses for the market. That was certainly the problem in the early part of the week when clearance rates told their own story and reflected the lower end yearling sales in every location. Painful though it may be for us all to take, it may have a beneficial effect in the medium to long term, with the result that we come out of this dip all the stronger."

Beeby added, "Bloodstock Industry professionals are an admirably resilient bunch, as this is all we know and it is our life. We are enduring hard times, but I truly believe that we have a world class product, and I continue to urge positivity where possible, as it is always easier to cope with problems with a smile rather than a scowl. Our horses are the best in the world and we are rightly proud of what we produce. One only need look at our racetrack results in 2008 to see that we continue to lead the field with winners in every corner of the globe at the highest level. It is those unparalleled results upon which we must focus, and the industry may rest assured that Goffs will do everything in our power to seek out buyers, to innovate and to help lead us forward. As an independent auction house, we exist to serve all sectors of the industry, as we are in this together and will work together to our mutual benefit. As ever, we are indebted to every vendor and every buyer whom we have welcomed to Goffs this week and wish them every success in the future. We look forward to their next visit." ‘CONGOR’ COMES CALLING FOR CASSE

Ontario-based trainer Mark Casse is invading Southern California for the first time this winter, and spearheading the effort is Congor Bay (Speightstown--Pico Teneriffe, by Red Ransom). The undefeated juvenile colt will make his stakes debut in the GIII Hollywood Prevue S. Sunday.

Casse, who leads the Woodbine trainers' standings in wins and earnings, will oversee a string of 18 horses in Southern California.

Congor Bay
 WEG/Michael Burns

Congor Bay, the first Casse trainee to arrive in the Golden State, is a half-brother to Marchfield (A.P. Indy), winner of the 2007 Breeders' S., the final leg of the Canadian Triple Crown. In his debut, Congor Bay prevailed by 6 3/4 lengths under a hand-ride when traveling six furlongs Oct. 1. He then returned to take an entry-level allowance going 6 1/2 furlongs by two lengths Oct. 26, also at the Toronto racetrack. The Eugene Melnyk homebred has already shown he can sit behind horses and pounce in the stretch, which could help his chances if there's a hot pace in Sunday's seven-furlong feature.

"We try to train our two-year-olds to rate," Casse said. "He has drawn post one both times, and last time he had to go from the inside. We think he'll be sitting off and running late [in the Prevue]."

While Marchfield had the stamina to take the 12-furlong Breeders S. on turf and recently proved victorious in the GII Autumn S. at 1 1/16 miles over Polytrack at Woodbine Nov. 9, Congor Bay may have "distance limitations," Casse admitted.

"Marchfield is by A.P. Indy and he's a larger horse," Casse elaborated. "Congor Bay is on the smaller side, and his mom was a really good miler on turf."

Casse believes grass may in the future of Congor Bay, but added, "We're just taking it one race at a time. I'd love to think he's a two-turn horse and, until he proves otherwise, that's the direction we'll head. This race is a good test."

Since detailed records began being kept 32 years ago, six horses have visited the Churchill winner's circle eight times. Canela is eight-for-13 at the track, and a perfect four-for-four on the Matt Winn Turf Course. Trainer Mike Maker claimed him for $25,000 back in May for Scarlet Stable. "I had always been a big fan of his when he was running in starter allowance races," Maker said. "Plus he is a great-looking horse and had been running well going a mile and a quarter, even though it wasn't against the same level that he'll be [today]." Third behind Zanjero in the GII Kentucky Cup Classic on the Turfway Poly in September, Canela comes off a 5 1/4-length score in an optional claimer over the River City course and distance Nov. 6.

TDN Q&A

Halsey Minor is on a mission. A horse lover and passionate racing fan, he is worried about the sport's future, which he predicts is bleak. Determined to do something to turn the sport's fortunes around, the 43-year-old Virginian is attempting to buy and revive Hialeah and has also gone public with plans to take over Magna Entertainment Corporation and its many tracks. Minor says his tracks will offer a fan-friendly experience, outstanding customer service and will do so in a bucolic setting. That, he says, is how you put people back in the seats of America's mostly empty racetracks.

Minor grew up around horses. His mother is an accomplished equestrian and he has fond memories of watching horses like Secretariat run in the Kentucky Derby as a child. Just 29 at the time, he founded the tech-news company CNET in 1993. The media company was so successful that it was one of only two Internet companies selected in 1999 to join the elite NASDAQ 100. Minor eventually sold CNET but has remained busy since. An entrepreneur with an insatiable appetite for new ventures, he has started several new companies besides CNET and is developing a five-star hotel in Charlottesville, Va. Minor continues to invest in new companies in a broad range of fields through his current company, San Francisco-based Minor Ventures. He also recently purchased the historic Carter's Grove Plantation in Williamsburg, Va. for $15.3 million and plans to use much of the acreage to develop his own breeding farm.

Despite his many ventures, Minor has found time to wage determined battles to acquire Hialeah and the Magna tracks. He says he is also interested in building some new tracks, including one in Virginia.

He is never afraid to step on people's toes or speak his mind, part of his aggressive style. If he wants something, he doesn't give up until he gets it.

In 2008, The Wall Street Journal estimated Minor's wealth at $300 million.

Bill Finley sat down with Minor on behalf of the TDN.

Storm Cat - She's A Winner, by A.P. Indy

First Foals Give Cause for Paws

Bluegrass Cat's weanling average of $158,916 ranks behind only Bernardini among First-Crop Sires.

TDN: Only a few years ago, you were relatively unknown inside racing circles. Today, you are an owner, are attempting to buy several racetracks and are waging a high-profile personal battle to bring racing back to its glory days. How did you go from one extreme to the other?

HM: In 2001, I retired from CNET after having spent every moment of my life from my high school days on running that company. When I retired, I immediately did the thing that I always wanted to do, but which requires time and money, and that was to get into horse-racing. I spent a lot of time with my good friend Bill Farish doing the sales and I spent a lot of time around the Phipps family. As a media person, I came to the conclusion that the sport I knew and loved as a kid and always had a passion for was on its way to perishing and I wanted to do something about that. What I ended up doing what hiring D.G. Van Clief's son, Danny. With him, I developed a plan, a Triple Crown like-event for 4-year-olds and up that would create continuity with the Triple Crown. It was called the National Horse Racing League and the idea behind was guided by my philosophies on why racing was dying. I published a very lengthy article in 2002 in the Blood-Horse that basically laid out two things: one, why the industry was headed toward extinction and, two, my proposal for something we could do to help turn things around.

I started out the article by showing a newspaper, a New York Times from 1959 that said "The Sports of Kings is now the king of sports." It was a story about how racing was the No. 1 sport in America.

TDN: What happened to the National Horse Racing League?

HM: There were people who didn't like the fact that I was just going to do classic horses in the series and the reason I was doing classic horses only is because that's what people actually want to watch on TV. Another group came out with this Thoroughbred Championship Tour. It was the most convoluted, complicated thing you ever saw and it had absolutely no chance of ever being successful. But it did have the effect of blunting whatever I wanted to do. I sat across the table from Reynolds Bell and John Phillips and John Phillips was looking at me like I was a competitor because he was trying to start this thing. I said, 'Guys, I'm not doing this for the money.' In fact, my pro forma showed that I was going to lose money. I told him, 'I am doing this because I want fans to come back. You're opposing me, but why? All I want is to bring people into thoroughbred racetracks and have them sit down on the seats and enjoy themselves.' It was very frustrating because I got no traction whatsoever.

TDN: What were some of your theories concerning the sport's decline?

HM: What I quickly realized after I talked to people was that if you talked to 100 people, 50 would say we compete with gambling and 50 would say we compete with professional sports. The problem with the industry is that it is schizophrenic and if you're schizophrenic you don't know how to market. Who are you talking to? How are you talking to them? You can't define who you are if you don't know what you are. And if you don't know what you are, you can't communicate with people. I had a great deal of information on the demographics of the sport and saw that the average fan was 69 years old. I saw that we had to begin to build fans and put people in seats. I don't think we compete with Las Vegas. We compete with other sports. If you look at football, it only talks about the sport and yet the amount of money wagered on it is of a greater magnitude than horseracing. In the world of football, you don't even have to talk about gambling to get gambling. What you have to talk about is the sport and get people to believe in the sport. I had a conviction about one thing. In one of the NTRA handicapper competitions, a janitor from Oakland won and they put him on the front page of their website with a Penthouse playmate. Who are we trying to talk to? Who seriously thought through the marketing and positioning of the industry and decided that that graphic is going to drive more fans into the industry?

TDN: After your series concept never got going, what became your main focus?

HM: I didn't start buying horses way back then because I decided I was going to dedicate my energy to saving the sport; thoroughbred racing is as important to me as anything outside of my family. I was talking to a former board member of one of Frank Stronach's companies and I told him I'm so dangerous because I don't care about the money, I just care about the sport. There are so many self-serving people in this sport who have agendas other than growing thoroughbred racing. All I want is to put people back in the seats. That's my goal and there's nothing else. I have made plenty of money and I have seven companies and a hotel. I have my needs covered. What I don't have is confidence that the most beautiful sport there is can feel secure about its future. Tom Meeker told me in 2002 that there was not a fan problem. I promptly pointed out to him that he clearly had not seen the ESPN research that showed pro wrestling had more fans and that horse racing was about as popular as bowling. I have never agreed with the way Magna has gone about things. Every philosophy that Frank Stronach has is opposite of mine. I believe that racing should look more like Saratoga, Keeneland, Del Mar. I don't think it should look like a three-headed hydra of shopping mall, track and slots.

I'm a marketer and I think I'm a pretty good one and I know those three things don't go together any more than if I served you soup out of an Alpo can. Even if it were great soup you'd probably get sick to your stomach. People think of horses and they think of grass and trees. They think of Hialeah in its day. That's what works. After I couldn't get the series going I was very despondent and I basically sort of picked up my marbles and left and went back and started some more companies and went through a divorce. Then a couple of years ago, my mom, who had always wanted to get involved in thoroughbred racing, asked that I buy some horses with her. I bought a couple of nice broodmares in the half million-dollar range. But, along the way, I was thrown right back into the same frustrations that I had experienced six years before. Only this time I had watched the carnage that had occurred as a result of the actions of Magna Entertainment and the lack of general management in the industry and the lack of general vision in the industry. It was redlined. I thought, 'what can I do where nobody can really interfere with me or interfere with me the least?' I realized that if I owned a track then I could control the experience inside the track. From the time you walk through the gates till the time you walk back through the gates, I can control that experience completely. Track ownership gives me the ability to define what thoroughbred racing is and so that's when I said, 'OK, I want to own a track.'

TDN: Which track or tracks were first on your list?

HM: I looked at Colonial Downs in Virginia and they wanted $40 million for that, which is ridiculous because the track is in the middle of nowhere. I'm very mindful of competition for people's time and you cannot build a track that is 45 minutes away from any cities. Convenience is essential. I've been constantly looking for opportunities to build tracks. The tracks I want to build are like Hialeah. I think there's an extraordinarily good business to be had by building beautiful facilities that deliver a flawless experience.

TDN: Give us some examples of how your racetracks would be different from others?

HM: Racing is the only sport that hasn't had a reformation. Racing started out as kings and queens and lords betting against each other and then ultimately attracting people who would come and watch. The fan was secondary. The sport was run for the participants. The problem is that racing is still run for the participants. A great example is night racing. I've said that I want to run at night and what I get back from people is that a lot of horsemen don't like night racing because it keeps them up too late. I don't care. The nighttime is when people can watch racing because most people have jobs. So get over it. You can't just say the horsemen don't like it. It's not about them. It's about the fans and it's about accommodating the fans and making the adjustments you need to accommodate the fans.

TDN: How are you and Hialeah owner John Brunetti getting along these days?

HM: I haven't been able to reach terms with John Brunetti. I'll say this publicly: I think he's a very selfish man to allow the facility to just decay like that. I don't have any compassion for the people who have selfishly sucked the life out of the sport. We wouldn't be in the shape we're in if there weren't people who didn't selfishly suck the life out of the sport. He's sitting on one of the icons of the sport and he has no intention of doing anything other than walking into a restaurant and having somebody pointing at him and saying, 'Oh, there's John Brunetti, he owns Hialeah?'

TOC REACHES AGREEMENT WITH ADW COMPANIES

The Thoroughbred Owners of California yesterday reached a one-year agreement with the four advance-deposit wagering companies licensed in the state, ending a stalemate that had prevented out-of-state ADW customers from wagering on California racing. TwinSpires.com, TVG, XpressBet and Youbet.com were expected to begin taking wagers from out-of-state customers on Friday night's card at Hollywood Park. A press release sent out by the TOC credited the Thoroughbred Horsemen's Group with facilitating the settlement. "This agreement represents substantial progress in achieving goals set by the THG, which are critical to fans and owners everywhere," noted TOC Chair Marsha Naify. "TOC and THG have steadfastly advocated for broader, non-exclusive distribution of our race signals for wagering purposes. A cornerstone of this accord is that it ensures non-exclusive distribution of our races signals so that fans can wager through the provider of their choice. But most importantly, we have made real progress in ensuring that purses receive a greater share of the revenues earned on ADW wagers." TOC Board member Pablo Suarez added, "THG and TOC also sought to ensure that, rather than changing takeout rates and raising the cost of a wager for players, the industry worked within itself to implement a more equitable distribution of existing revenues. We can do so by scaling such things as host and source market fees with ADW handle growth. This agreement is a step in that direction, and gives all concerned a starting point from which we go forward, together." Earlier this week, the California Horse Racing Board had threatened they would not renew the licenses for the four ADW companies if an agreement could not be reached. The licenses expire Dec. 31, 2008. "We apologize to California Thoroughbred race fans everywhere for the inconvenience, disappointment, and frustration they endured while these fundamental questions were addressed, but TOC believes that this accord establishes a process by which such impasses may be avoided in the future, and that should be a relief to everyone," said TOC President Drew J. Couto. "TOC is grateful to the THG for its efforts on behalf of California, and owners everywhere. We remain committed to working with and through the THG in the future, as it has clearly proven to be a valuable advocate on issues vital to us all. We also wish to thank our track partners, Chairman [Richard] Shapiro and members of the California Horse Racing Board, and representatives of Xpressbet, Twin Spires, Magna Entertainment, Churchill Downs and Youbet, all of whom worked hard to resolve the impasse."

Churchill to Expand Derby Seats Drawings:

Churchill Downs Inc. announced yesterday that, starting Nov. 22 and continuing until the current Churchill meet ends Nov. 29, there will be daily drawings at the track for the opportunity to buy two seats to the 2009 GI Kentucky Derby. It was also announced yesterday that most ticket prices for the 2009 Kentucky Derby and Kentucky Oaks will be offered at the same level as in 2008. A total of 500 pairs of Derby tickets will be made available through Churchill's daily drawings. Those in attendance at the track can fill out entry forms at Guest Services stations at Gates 10 and 17. Entries must be turned in by 1:35 p.m. to be eligible for that day's drawings. Fifty names will be drawn Nov. 22 and 23, and 100 names Nov. 26 through Nov. 29. "Our goal in creating the public drawing...two years ago was to allow an even broader audience to enjoy America's premier horse race first-hand, especially racing fans from Louisville and neighboring communities who support Churchill Downs on a year-round basis," said Churchill President Steve Sexton.
