

HISTORY MADE AT TATTERSALLS BUT HARSH REALITY OF LOWER MARKET TIER IS EVIDENT

Britain's first female bloodstock auctioneer Shirley Anderson-Jolag
Tattersalls

By Emma Berry

NEWMARKET, UK — In contrast to the opening day of foal trade in Ireland just over a week ago, the Tattersalls December Foal Sale was slower out of the blocks with a clearance rate of 60%. The average and median did improve throughout the day and ended with slight increases on this session last year at 12,086gns (+8%) and 9,000gns (+13%). Turnover, from 111 of the 182 foals sold, dipped by 14% to 1,341,500gns, albeit from 24 fewer foals changing hands than on the corresponding day last year. Of those weanlings who found a buyer, 21 were bought for the minimum bid of 1,000gns.

There are doubtless different factors at play, with the noted influx of young Irish vendors last week far more likely to get involved locally initially, especially when it comes to the extra expense in travelling horses in and out of the EU since Brexit. There is not the same level of interest in foal pinhooking among British-based buyers, and the number of smaller British breeders has been in decline, along with the size of the foal crop. Cont. p3

JAMES HORTON TO TRAIN FROM STOUTE'S BEECH HURST STABLES

James Horton has secured a lease on Beech Hurst Stables in Newmarket and will continue his training career there. It is the former base of the recently retired Sir Michael Stoute. Stoute, who trained star-crossed G1 Derby hero Shergar (GB) (Great Nephew {GB}) at Beech Hurst, later expanded to Freemason Lodge.

The 37-year-old Horton, a former Stoute assistant for seven years, previously trained for John Dance, who subsequently came under investigation for fraud last spring. Horton announced he was relocating to Newmarket in September of 2023, and was based out of Harry Eustace's Park Lodge Stables.

"We're very lucky, we've been able to secure a lease on Beech Hurst Stables for next year," he told Sky Sports Racing.

Don't miss his First Crop of Foals selling at Tattersalls this week

That will doubtless continue, in the short term at least. At this end of the market, the sums involved simply do not make commercial sense for breeders aiming to sell rather than race the horses they produce.

It will be a different story come Friday of course, with some smartly bred individuals set to grace the ring, but for this first of four foal sessions it was a case of a steady start, albeit with an important piece of bloodstock history at the beginning of the day.

As is customary, Tattersalls chairman Edmond Mahony took to the rostrum to offer the first five foals through the ring, none of which was sold, and then came the debut of Shirley Anderson-Jolag, who became the first female bloodstock auctioneer in Britain, knocking down her first lot (211), a filly by Ubettabelieveit (Ire), for 1,000gns to an online bid from HWRS. Applause rippled round the ring but Anderson-Jolag, who has been building up to this moment with plenty of practice through the last two years, pressed on in businesslike fashion to successfully complete what will be the first of two stints on the rostrum this week.

"I had a good solid year of practice with Edmond [Mahony]," she said. "Harvey Bell has been really helpful, too, and I have sold cattle, antiques, sold after auction races and at charity events. About a year and a half ago it was Hannah Wall and David Redvers who gave me my first charity auction at a hunt ball – they kind of made me do it, which was great as I would probably have said no."

Of the response to her first turn in the ring, she added, "It has been nothing but positive from everyone, and I am glad I have finally done it. Standing behind Edmond to go up to the front of the rostrum I felt as sick as a dog, but I knew I had the support of people and, once I saw people coming into the ring, that made me really happy, it was lovely. Once I got that first lot under my belt, I was okay."

She continued, "Hopefully, in five years it will be norm, and loads of women will be doing this. It did weigh on me a bit coming into today but only for positive reasons, because I wanted to be good for other women coming through."

Commenting on Anderson-Jolag's historic debut, Mahony said, "The company is nearly 260 years old, so to have a first female auctioneer is quite a moment. Tattersalls is viewed as a very traditional company and it is quite nice to buck the trend and be the first to achieve this. It is a great achievement on Shirley's behalf, she has put a lot of work into this. She was obviously nervous this morning, but she will be a lot freer and relaxed going forwards." Cont. p4

First-Crop Space Traveller Colt Shines

A colt from the first crop of Space Traveller (GB) provided one of the highlights of the afternoon with a flurry of activity for the half-brother to the Windsor Castle Stakes winner Ain't Nobody (Ire) (Sands Of Mali {Fr}). The final bid for lot 385 was placed online at 82,000gns, with the colt, bred by Steve Parkin's Rathbride Farm, being marked as sold to Mick Carty of Kilmoney Cottage Stud. The colt's dam Burmese Waltz (GB) (Showcasing {GB}) was a multiple winner for Parkin's Clipper Logistics, as was Space Traveller, winner of the G2 Boomerang Stakes and now resident at Starfield Stud.

Tom Blain, whose Barton Stud was the leading vendor on day one with 13 sold for 225,000gns, said, "Steve Parkin wanted to show the industry that the stallion is producing good foals, and I think this foal has achieved that – and he has a good pedigree with a Royal Ascot winner this year. He is good enough to be offered any day, this week, but today has paid off and all the judges were on him, all the pinhookers."

Barton Stud also sold a colt by Pinatubo (Ire) (lot 387) on behalf of breeder Charlie Wyatt of Dukes Stud for 50,000gns to Anna Raddavero of St Simon Bloodstock.

She said of the son of the listed-placed High Hopes (GB) (Zamindar), "This is our first experience buying here. We'll see how he grows and then decide because we have some that we sell and others that we race."

Raddavero also experienced her first winner in Britain this month when the Marco

Botti-trained two-year-old Palazzo Blu (Ire) (Saxon Warrior {Jpn}) won on debut at Chelmsford. Cont. p5

Proven Standout

Bidding through Paddy Vaughan, Roger and Tony O'Callaghan snapped up a son of Nathaniel (Ire) from Tom and Alexandra Whitehead's Altenbach Bloodstock for 55,000gns. An outlier in as much as the colt was the sole weanling in the top 20 sold whose sire had won at 1m2f or more.

"A very athletic colt," was Roger O'Callaghan's assessment of lot 376, who is a half-brother to the listed Prix Finlande winner Olendon (Fr) (Le Havre {Ire}) who was also runner-up in the G1 Prix Saint-Alary.

Saxtead's Faith in A'Ali Rewarded

Members of the Yeomanstown Stud team were decked out in caps advertising their new stallion Mill Stream (Ire) and, as ever, were active foal buyers, signing up three new recruits for 78,000gns.

At the head of that trio was lot 271, the A'Ali (Ire) first foal of the winning Aclaim (Ire) mare Kelapa (GB). The colt, who fetched 40,000gns, was bred by Bob and Fiona Temple of Saxtead Livestock, who also bred and raced the mare.

Fiona Temple said, "We have a breeding right in the stallion, and we have had two nice colts by him this year. Our mares tend to be quite big and he is a neat stallion."

She added, "We're over the moon that Yeomanstown have bought him – it is so important that the horses go on to good homes, especially as he is a first foal out of the mare, he will get every chance now."

The Temples are selling four colts this week through Barton Stud.

"They were all nice sorts and, as we do all the work ourselves, it is easier to deal with the colts as foals rather than yearlings," Temple said. Cont. p6

WITHOUT PAROLE FILLY MAKES TIME AT THE FAIR GROUNDS

In this series, the TDN takes a look at notable successes of European-based sires in North America. This column is highlighted by the victory of Serving Time at the Fair Grounds in New Orleans.

Third Time's The Charm For Serving Time

Breeders' Cup-winning trainer Cherie DeVaux saddled Serving Time (GB) (Without Parole {GB}) to win at third asking at the Fair Grounds on Nov. 23 (chart). Owned by John Gunther, Eurowest Bloostock and Borders Racing Stable, the 2-year-old filly became the 12th winner for her first-season sire (by Frankel (GB)) who stands at Newsells Park Stud in Britain. Bred by John and Tanya Gunther and Borders Racing Stable, Serving Time is the first foal out of Cubit (GB) (Bated Breath {GB}), a winner as a 3-year-old over a mile at Saint-Cloud. The filly has a yearling half-sister by Too Darn Hot (GB), and a weanling full-brother. In the spring of 2024, Cubit was bred to Good Magic.

This is the family of G1 Irish Derby and G1 Grand Prix de Saint-Cloud winner Westover (GB) (Frankel {GB}) and Grade III winner Monarchs Glen (GB) (Frankel {GB}), both half-brothers to Cubit. The trio are out of GIII Churchill Distaff Turf Mile heroine Mirabilis (Lear Fan), herself a half-sister to G1 Prix de Diane heroine Nebraska Tornado (Storm Cat).

Without Parole has two-time Group 3 runner-up Fiery Lucy (GB) and the multiple stakes-placed Sea To Sky (Ire) in his first crop worldwide. However, Serving Time is not his first winner in North America, with that honour going to Without Caution.

Ten Sovereigns Filly Graduates In Florida

Lush Lips (GB) (Ten Sovereigns {Ire}) trotted up at Gulfstream Park to win by seven lengths for Medallion Racing, Steve Weston, Mrs. Paul Shanahan and Mrs. MV Magnier last weekend. Trained by Brendan Walsh, the daughter of the winner Lamyaa (GB) (Arcano {Ire}) was making her fourth start (video).

Bred by the Pocock Family, Lush Lips sold for £82,000 out of the Goffs UK Premier Yearling Sale to Avenue Bloodstock/Medallion Racing and Donnacha O’Brien. She made two starts in Ireland for O’Brien and the above partners and Hoffman, in July and August. Her latest half-sibling is a weanling colt by Harry Angel (Ire), while German multiple group winner Electric Beat (GB) (Shinko Forest {Ire}) is a half to her dam. Another half-sister to Lamyaa is responsible for the group winners Melo Melo (GB) (Gleneagles {Ire}) (second in the G1 Prix Vermeille) and Treasuring (GB) (Havana Gold {Ire}), who won at the group/graded level in North America and Ireland.

Coolmore’s Ten Sovereigns has six winners from nine runners (67%) in the U.S. Dual graded winner Zulu Kingdom (Ire) is his best in that jurisdiction, and he has another four black-type horses there so far.

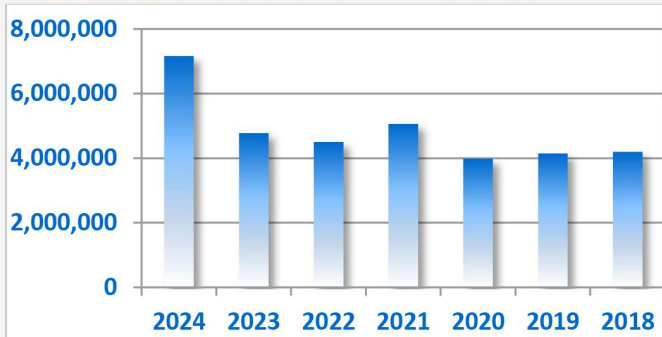

Dandy Man Miss States Her Case

Rancho Temescal Thoroughbred Partners’ Miss Mandalay (GB) (Dandy Man {Ire}) put it all together to win at Del Mar on Nov. 23 (video). Trained by Robert Hess, Jr., the bay was making her fifth appearance.

Part of the Workshop Manor Stud breeding programme, Miss Mandalay sold for £32,000 to JRSA from her breeders in the Goffs UK Premier Yearling Sale in 2022. Cont. p8

In her first start, she was second at Wolverhampton for trainer Kevin Philippart de Foy and owners Curran, Fitzwilliams, Newton, and Railton. She is one of three winners for Belle Travers (GB) (Bahamian Bounty {GB}) whose latest trio of foals are a filly by Bobby's Kitten and colts by Lope Y Fernandez (Ire) and Oasis Dream (GB) born in 2022, 2023, and 2024, respectively. Second dam Forthefirsttime (GB) (Dr Fong) won the Listed Flame Of Tara Stakes.

Ballyhane's late Dandy Man now has 15 winners from 27 runners (56%) in America. First-season sire River Boyne (Ire), who won the GI Frank E. Kilroe Mile Stakes at Santa Anita, is his best runner there, but he also has the stakes winner Dandy Man Shines (Ire), and an additional five stakes horses.

Repeat Winner:

Newstead Stables' Laurelin (Ire) (Zarak {Fr}), who featured in the column in October, earned her stakes rosette in the Tepin Stakes at Aqueduct for Graham Motion on Nov. 17 (video). She is one of 28 stakes winners for her sire internationally, who will stand at the Aga Khan Studs' Haras de Bonneval in France for €80,000 next year.

He said, "Obviously, everything went a bit upside down about 18 months ago, so this year has very much been a sort of rebuilding year. This time last year, we hadn't even moved into the yard, with just a handful of horses.

"We've had 10 winners from just over 100 runners, with a lot of 2-year-olds who we're educating and are exciting horses for next year.

"It's been very much a rebuilding year but we've been lucky enough to secure the lease on Beech House, which will be a fantastic opportunity for us."

"I spent seven years with Sir Michael and during the entirety of that time, Beech Hurst was part of the set-up," added Horton.

"Some would have called it the second yard but it very much was a yard that worked within the base of Freemason and they were two yards that worked together and worked very well.

"So, I know Beech Hurst very well and it's great to be back there, I'm really looking forward to it; the location is excellent, it's a healthy yard, the horses thrive there and we're absolutely delighted to have been given the opportunity.

"Sir Michael, in my eyes, between him and Sir Henry Cecil, were two of the greats that us younger guys were able to witness on the Heath in the mornings. To be able to work alongside him for seven years was an honour and something I'll always remember.

"He's a great character and I've spoken to him plenty the last couple of years with the things that have gone on and he had plenty of wise words to keep us on the straight and narrow."

Roger Varian was previously leasing Beech Hurst Stables.

FELICITY BARNARD TO SUCCEED ALASTAIR WARWICK AS ASCOT CEO

Felicity Barnard has been appointed as chief executive of Ascot Racecourse, with Alastair Warwick set to stand down from the role at the end of the year for personal reasons, the course announced on Tuesday. Barnard currently serves as deputy chief executive at Ascot, alongside her role as commercial director.

Sir Francis Brooke, chairman and His Majesty's representative at Ascot Racecourse, said, "Alastair has played a major role in the success of Ascot Racecourse since he joined the business in 2008, most recently as chief executive where he has overseen two very important and successful Royal Meetings in the new reign of King Charles III.

"We are all grateful to him on so many levels and thank him for his dedication to Ascot over the past 16 years. For personal reasons Alastair has expressed a wish to step down from his role at Ascot. This will allow him time to consider other opportunities for the next stage of his career and we all wish him well.

"I am delighted that Fliss Barnard has accepted the Board's invitation to become chief executive," Brooke continued. "Fliss has already brought considerable commercial expertise to the racecourse and the wider industry. Additionally, she has led on initiatives which have seen a significant expansion of Ascot's global profile."

Warwick said, "It has been an absolute privilege to work for and then lead this organisation over the past 16 years. Ascot and Royal Ascot is only ever something you are a custodian of but during my time it has been a pleasure to see Ascot flourish and grow so much whilst supporting the community that it is a part of."

Before joining Ascot, Barnard spent four years as CEO of Tie Break Tens, where she launched the new short format of tennis internationally. She also worked at Arsenal Football Club, both in London and Singapore, and at West Ham United as their commercial director.

Barnard added, "I am very excited to have been appointed to lead the business and look forward to working alongside the rest of the racing industry to promote the sport in an increasingly competitive environment."

ROMANTIC WARRIOR GIVEN MEYDAN ENTRY AHEAD OF UNPRECEDENTED HAT-TRICK BID

Regular rider James McDonald has issued a positive bulletin on Romantic Warrior (Ire) (Acclamation {GB}) ahead of his bid for a historic third consecutive win in the HK$40 million G1 Longines Hong Kong Cup at Sha Tin on Sunday, December 8.

California Memory (Highest Honor {Fr}) is the only other dual winner of the Hong Kong Cup in 2011 and 2012, which means Romantic Warrior would be out on his own as the most successful horse in the race's history should he repeat his 2022 and 2023 triumphs at the Longines Hong Kong International Races (HKIR).

Victory would also promote Romantic Warrior (HK$154.92 million/€18.9 million) ahead of Golden Sixty (Aus) (Medaglia d'Oro) (HK$167.17 million/€20.4 million) into the position of the world's highest-earning racehorse of all time.

"He wears his heart on his sleeve," McDonald said of the six-year-old Romantic Warrior, who could seek further riches in the Middle East early next year, having been given an entry in the G1 Al Maktoum Challenge at Meydan on Friday, January 24.

"He's a once-in-a-lifetime horse and I would love to see him win a third. Even watching his videos at trackwork, he's moving like a well-oiled machine--he's just really strutting his stuff. He's in career-best form.

"It's a great day [HKIR] to be part of and to have a live chance is even better. I just enjoy coming back to ride him [Romantic Warrior]. He gives you so much confidence as a rider. You just look forward to the day--it's very self-explanatory."

MAGIC MILLIONS CONTENDER KING KIRK DIES IN FREAK ACCIDENT

King Kirk (Aus), one of the most promising two-year-olds in Australia following his debut win in the G3 Breeders' Plate at Randwick last month, has died as a result of a freak accident, Racenet reported on Tuesday.

Trained by Gai Waterhouse and Adrian Bott, King Kirk had participated in a barrier trial earlier in the day as he continued his preparation for a tilt at the R. Listed Magic Millions 2YO Classic on the Gold Coast on Saturday, January 11. Cont. p13

However, the son of first-season sire Ole Kirk (Aus) reportedly encountered difficulties during a routine swim after his exercise on the track and could not be saved.

In a release seen by Racenet, the Waterhouse and Bott stable told MyRacehorse syndicate members involved in the colt, "Unfortunately, King Kirk has passed away this afternoon following an incident that occurred during his recovery.

"King Kirk was routinely swimming at the Randwick Racecourse horse pool under the supervision of his regular handler and foreman, when he panicked causing him to swallow a significant amount of water in the process.

"Despite the efforts by his handlers, ATC [Australian Turf Club], staff and veterinarians, he sadly could not be saved."

ILLUMINARE LATEST TO SHINE A LIGHT ON CENTENNIAL

Don Little and Illuminare | Sarah Andrew

by Chris McGrath

If only Thomas Crown had been introduced to something like Centennial Farms, he might have spared himself a lot of trouble. As it was, the bored millionaire played by Steve McQueen in the 1968 classic sought his kicks from a bank heist, as an experiment in the perfect crime. And he instead confined his exposure to horses to the polo field.

But that was where the fictional adrenaline junkie encountered a father and son who would subsequently provide their clients, in real life, with all the excitement they could need on the racetrack. For the polo scene was shot at Myopia Hunt Club in Boston, then home terrain for Donald Little, Jr. and his late father, Donald, Sr., founder of Centennial.

Little would himself become a top-class polo professional, and McQueen spent several days in their company while learning the ropes.

“He came in every day for two weeks, got on one of our ponies and took lessons from the guy who ran our barn,” Little recalls. “And he actually wasn't bad at all. Anyway my dad and uncle were in that scene with him, though you only see Dad for about 30 seconds.”

EVERETT DOBSON JOINS TDN WRITERS' ROOM PODCAST

There will be a changing of the guard in August when Stuart Janney, III steps down from his long-held position as the Chairman of The Jockey Club. His replacement will be owner-breeder Everett Dobson. Janney recommended Dobson, and the board of stewards of The Jockey Club agreed.

Dobson has long involved himself with some of the sport's most important and influential organizations. He is on his second term as a steward of The Jockey Club. He serves on the executive committee of the Thoroughbred Owners and Breeders Association and is immediate past chairman of the American Graded Stakes Committee. Dobson serves as a member of the Breeders' Cup in addition to being a trustee of the Keeneland Association. He now takes over one of the most important jobs in the sport, but it's one that requires hours of work, no salary and will involve slings and arrows from those who are not happy with the direction The Jockey Club has gone. Cont. p8

The scene was innovatively edited so that the screen fractured into multiple, rotating frames of different size. And that, as it happens, is pretty much the formula developed by Little's father when starting Centennial in 1982. Over the years since, these pioneers of syndicate ownership have raided the bank vaults, and at rather less peril, with the likes of champion sprinter Rubiano, GI Belmont Stakes winner Colonial Affair and inaugural GI Breeders' Cup Dirt Mile scorer Corinthian. Last year a Centennial partnership briefly found itself on the Derby trail with the luckless Litigate (Blame), while the program's latest star is Illuminare (City of Light). Having twice impressed at Saratoga, the 3-year-old bounced back from a first defeat with a big number at Aqueduct earlier this month.

Long before that journey began, however, Little's father could have made even Mr. Crown feel rather pedestrian.

"Dad was the youngest strategic air pilot in the Korean War," Little says. "Full captain at 19. He had his first racehorse when he was 16, and rode him on the farm in Ipswich, Mass, which we still have today as a retirement home for some of our Thoroughbreds. But then his whole family was adventurous. My grandmother rode steeplechasers, and there was a little sibling rivalry between Dad and his sister, Trish Moseley, who's still racing horses today. A few years ago she had [multiple GSW] Proctor's Ledge (Ghostzapper), whose daughter Proctor Street (Street Sense) won at Saratoga this summer."

This is actually the family of Topsider, who was co-bred by Moseley's husband James. In other words, the Littles have long been immersed in horses of one kind or another.

Tragically, that passion would ultimately prove fatal to Little's father, through an equestrian fall in 2012. But the very fact that he was still competing, at 77, measures the vitality that made him so formidable in everything he did.

His day job had been investment banking.

"But then he said, 'Why don't I start a little racing company with some of my buddies from Wall Street?'" recalls Little. "So he hired Dr. [Stephen] Carr, whom he knew from playing polo in Aiken, South Carolina, to look for the horses with Paula Parsons, who runs our farm in Virginia; and Allen Jerkens, to train them, again having got to know him through polo. Dad actually used the racing to help feed his investment business. The majority of his clients were people he'd met at the races and sales."

At the time, Dogwood was about the only competition for what has since become such a popular model for spreading risk in ownership. But in an unprecedented market, fueled by the Maktoums and others, the Centennial program was offering another way. With half a dozen investors, in 1983 they immediately found a colt from Danzig's first crop, Nordance, a stakes winner sold profitably to stand in Europe. They were on their way.

Colonial Affair | Coglianesse

"But the biggest thing was the change in the tax laws in 1986," Little recalls. "When we started, limited partnerships were the be-all and end-all for tax write-offs. Horses came into play because people didn't have to know anything about the business, didn't even need to enjoy the sport, because they could write it off. The good thing was that the horse partnerships were short term. We were able to survive a gap of about three years before all limited partnerships went out."

Right around that time, in 1990, Little decided to make Centennial his post-polo professional focus. Hitherto fillies had been targeted, as offering some residual value.

“But I said, ‘What do people really want from these horses?’” Little recalls. “They want to win the Derby, the Classic races. And to do that, we have to buy colts. So we went out to buy colts that people couldn't generally afford, on their own, as something we could take to horse people. They could use a portion of their horse budget for a piece, knowing they'd end up with stallion shares if successful. And, if they were actively involved in the business, they could also write off the expenses.”

The very first such partnership promptly found Colonial Affair.

“So that stuck,” Little says. “And ever since, every three to five years, we've managed to come up with a stallion. We've placed 14 horses at stud since 1990.”

Whether or not Illuminare or this year's GI Belmont Stakes runner Antiquarian (Preservationist) can make it 15, that's a pretty remarkable record from no more than eight yearlings from each crop.

Typically these are split across two partnerships, with 18-month expenses up front.

“There's no markup,” Little stresses. “And Centennial doesn't get equity, other than by putting in funds ourselves. We charge a management fee just like an investment manager, based on the insured value of the horse--which goes up and down, based on performance. Pretty simple. Otherwise we're just a partner like everybody else.”

With time, Centennial learned to prioritize intimacy of involvement. Rubiano had 70 owners. Typically, partnerships now have 10 to 12 players, their investment and confidence both facilitated by the program's cyclical nature. Core contributors include Peter Horvitz and Margaret O'Meara, who were longtime partners before becoming co-owners of the Middleburg farm and Centennial itself since Little, Sr.'s passing.

“It's not like some of these professional [sports] teams, where you can say, ‘Oh, it's a rebuilding year,’ and blow the whole system up,” Little remarks. “You can't do that in this business, at least from my perspective. You can modify here and there. Adjust to changes in the breeding industry, for instance. If people see so many Into Mischiefs at the top, it would be hard to tell them that we should wait till Book Six and find an athletic individual. But in the end what it all comes down to is loyalty, commitment, and a program that's worked for many, many years.”

“And this isn't patting ourselves on the back, but the generational aspect helps make a story. It's the families in it for generations that have always maintained quality in the breed. Ask most people in this business, and they'll know who Centennial Farms are. Our reputation--open-book, honest, straightforward--precedes us. And that's very important.”

But however wholesome their brand, the Centennial team shares the industry's wider exposure to Main Street. Little is duly well placed to take the temperature.

"Well, HISA is a good move forward, in my opinion," he says. "There will always be flaws, but it was something that needed to be done. Because to increase the fan base, get new people, young people, they need a good feeling about it. We know how the press creates negativity, that a catastrophic story will always get ahead of good news. Fox and NBC do a very good job with the back stories. What's happening at Belmont is terrific, and getting some of these professional athletes involved has been very helpful, too. But in the end it has to come from all of us that participate in this sport."

For there's no knowing where that evangelism may take people, once persuaded to give the game a try. Little says that both Carl Icahn and the Go For Gin partners Bill Condren and Joe Cornacchia first sampled ownership through Centennial. In fact, Go For Gin was broken at the farm.

Having somewhere to raise the stock was central to the vision of Little's father.

Antiquarian | Coglianese

"No other syndicate has ever been able to break and train its horses at its own farm," Little says. "Our horses get an English-style foundation, which to me is crucial: building that skeletal structure. We don't push them, don't usually send 2-year-olds to the racetrack until early June.

"We're half-a-mile from the Middleburg Training Center, so they go there up and down the hill. There's a mental part to that, too: walking through the woods, they see deer, fox. And that's helpful for those that don't quite make it, because they can handle different things. We've a waiting list for our horses, because they're so easy to retrain, which must say something."

The farm also allows Centennial to work with individual clients, for instance those that want a filly instead. Again, that's all relationships. Unsurprising, therefore, that one of their key arteries should remain the polo community.

"We're one of the lead sponsors at the National Polo Center," Little says. "We had 300-plus people at a panel of Todd Pletcher, Johnny Velazquez, Julie Krone and Rajiv Maragh. Polo goes right back through the history of this sport: August Belmont, the Whitney family, the Vanderbilts, they all played. A lot of successful polo horses are Thoroughbreds, which have so much more speed and agility than other breeds. I used to ride a son of Topsider that my aunt gave me. And Peter Brant started his whole polo string by sending good mares to Argentina, to be bred strictly for polo."

Brant happens to stop by as his old friend is talking with TDN, during the sales at Keeneland. And, coincidentally, it turns out that it was "The Thomas Crown Affair" that began his own, reverse exploration of the polo world from the Thoroughbred side. Brant had been lured to the filmset by another form of horsepower: the famous Ferrari being driven by McQueen. He managed to buy it for $11,800, only for his father to forbid him such a flashy automobile--either he got rid of it, or he could find someplace else to work. Brant dutifully sold the car for $11,000 to a collector. The loss of $800, over two weeks, pales next to the $26 million banked by the collector when selling the vehicle

10 years ago.

But the margin between these two equine worlds is full of such character, and friendships. When Little's father was stationed at an airbase near Tucson, Arizona, he found a nearby ranch with an indoor polo arena. And when Litigate broke out last year, it emerged that it was the father of co-breeder John Donaldson who had given Little, Sr. polo instruction out there, all those years ago. Moreover the wife of another co-breeder, Happy Broadbent, was best friends with Little's sister at college. Which is just the kind of thing one should expect of a program like this. Because for all the expertise in management and selection, it depends first and foremost on the human connections forged through the horse.

"For us, it's all about consistency and drive, honesty and patience," Little enthuses. "Typically 70% of Centennial partners are re-investors. Everybody knows each other, does things together. We had a little gathering, on Belmont eve, with the Antiquarian partners. We'll have a little backyard barbecue, everything casual, and everybody intermingles. No, we're not going to make it to the Derby every year. We don't have hundreds of horses. But what we say we're going to do, we do. And more than anything, this is a club. These people become friends."

Dobson Joins Writers' Room Podcast

So why would he take the job? That was among the questions Dobson was asked when he joined our crew for this week's TDN Writers' Room Podcast presented by Keeneland. Dobson was the Gainesway Guest of the Week.

"My wife says that I am a glutton?" Dobson said. "So now I am. I just have a calling, I guess. I was asked to do it and I feel like I am capable and qualified to do it, so here I am."

Everett Dobson | Fasig-Tipton

Dobson will not be your prototypical Jockey Club Chairman. He didn't grow up with a silver spoon in his mouth as part of a wealthy family and he's not an Ivy Leaguer. He went to Southwest Oklahoma State University. Some, including Mike Repole, have accused The Jockey Club as being an "old boys club," in need of new blood and new ideas. Does he see his appointment as being symbolic of a changing of the guard?

"I think there's something to that," he replied when asked a question about his being new blood. "I'm coming to you from Oklahoma, which has been my residence for many years. I do have a farm in Kentucky and spend a fair amount of my time there. I think as much as anything, this is a recognition that the sport is evolving and it's changing. It's not the legacy sport that we knew from 100 years ago or even 25 years ago. My perspective is going to be from a business background. It's going to come from my being an owner and my involvement in the breeding and the racing side of the sport as well. I also have an investment in an NBA team, the Oklahoma City Thunder. So I will have a perspective on that. Stuart and I had a lot of conversations about my capabilities and what I might bring to the sport as well as the other stewards. I know many of them well and the rest I will get to know well. But I think there is a recognition that the sport is evolving and changing. And, hopefully, I can I can bring those perspectives that are going to matter in the future."

Prominent and outspoken, Repole was a severe critic of The Jockey Club and Janney in particular. Has Dobson had a chance to sit down with Repole yet and perhaps mend some fences?

"I mentioned that I have plans to meet with everybody," Dobson said. "I was at the Breeders' Cup and Mike and I were able to spend three hours together in a private room and had a great conversation. Very little did we disagree on. We do disagree on what our priorities should be. But Mike comes at it from a similar approach that I do in that he comes at a lot of the issues from a business background. This business is all about change. Business is about growing and being better. So on that, Mike and I agree. Only our styles are a little bit different. But that's okay. We laugh about that. But I do think Mike is like a lot of people in a sport in that he wants to see some improvement and some help."

Can Repole, the former nemesis, be an asset to The Jockey Club?

"Yes," Dobson said. "I don't think there's any question about that. I know Mike and I respect Mike. When it comes to what he's been saying, on a lot of topics, he is spot on. Now, his tactics, you know, sometimes they might differ with mine a little bit. But regardless, we need Mike."

In our weekly breeding spotlight section, we took a look at the Winstar stallion Timberlake.

Elsewhere on the podcast, which is also sponsored by the Pennsylvania Horse Breeders' Association, West Point Thoroughbreds, and XBTV.com, the team of Zoe Cadman, Bill Finley and Randy Moss talked about the return of White Abarrio (Race Day), an impressive winner in a Gulfstream Park allowance that will be one of two preps for the GI Pegasus World Cup. The impressive win by Two Sharp (Twirling Candy) in the GIII Chilukki S. at Churchill was another topic of discussion. They then turned their attention to the mess that is California racing and the brutally honest comments made recently by Aidan Butler, president of TSG's 1/ST business. Butler continues to lobby for some sort of merger of the Northern and Southern California circuits and said to do otherwise would be "suicide" for both regions.

CONTESSA FINED $4,000 BY GAMING COMMISSION STEWARD, VOWS TO FIGHT 'OUTRAGEOUS' PUNISHMENT by Bill Finley

When veteran New York trainer Gary Contessa ran a horse named Answer the Call (Dialed In) in a Sept. 25 claiming race at Delaware Park, he had no idea that he had violated a rule. He claimed the horse out of an Aug. 4 race at Saratoga and believed the filly was allowed to run outside of New York because more than 30 days had transpired since the claim. Little did he know that only a few days earlier, the rule was changed so that a claimed horse had to stay in New York for at least 60 days.

When he was told by New York State Gaming Commission Steward Braulio Baeza, Jr. that he was being fined $4,000, Contessa was outraged. Not only did that seem like a lot for a relatively minor offense, but as of Sept. 25, the listing of rules on the New York Racing Association website still had the old rule of 30 days.

"They put the rule into effect July 24," Contessa said. "On Oct. 17, when I got this ruling, the NYRA website still hadn't been changed to reflect the new rule.

Braulio reached out to me and said, 'I have to fine you for this.' I figured the fine would have been $500. I wouldn't have fought that. I might not even have fought a fine of $1,000. The horse earned $1,103. I made $100. He comes up with a $4,000 fine. The horse ran at Delaware 52 days after I claimed her. She had already run once in New York and was well beyond the 30 days, which was the rule for 30 years. I went on to NYRA's website and I double checked it. It said 30 days, end of story. When I said that to Braulio, he said it was my responsibility to know the Gaming Commission rules. Please. I don't think you could find a trainer in America who has ever gone on the Gaming Commission site to look at their rules because we get everything from NYRA. When I fill out a stall application, it says I am agreeing to follow NYRA's rules. NYRA didn't change the rules on their website.

"I said to Braulio, '$4,000, isn't that an awful lot considering the circumstances?' He said, 'That's my minimum fine. We give fines that count now.' The Gaming Commission reached out to me and offered a $2,000 fine. That was still too much. I would have paid a $1,000 fine. The $2,000 is too much because NYRA didn't even care to change the rule on their website."

Contessa has hired attorney Drew Mollica who has already filed an appeal with the Gaming Commission. He called the $4,000 fine "outrageous."

"The fine, even if there even should be one, is so outlandish, that this had to stop," he said. "The game is dying in New York because small trainers are dying by the minute. Seven is a big field, the barn area is three-quarters full. The rule was in place for 30 years and then they just changed it. $4,000? What did he do, kill the Lindbergh baby?"

Mollica said that in New York, administrative fines are upheld unless "they shock the conscience." He believes $4,000 for such a relatively minor offense is a matter of shocking the conscience and will use that in his defense.

"If this doesn't shock the conscience, this gaming commission has no conscience," he said. "That fine is so disproportionate to the alleged crime that it shocks the conscious, and it can't. That is the rule."

New York State Gaming Commission spokesman Brad Maione said there would be no comment.

"We have no comment while the matter is under appeal, adding that "the text of the ruling speaks for itself."

As has been the case numerous times over the last several years, Baeza is once again at the center of a controversy. His fines come across as heavy handed, he doesn't seem to consider the mitigating circumstances that may be involved, and the stewards have made a number of mistakes, for which he has been held blameless.

In December, the stewards--among whom Baeza is the most powerful--appeared to have disqualified the wrong horse in the $500,000 division of the Great White Way Stakes for New York-sired horses.

"He took the wrong horse down in the stakes back in December," Mollica said. "Did he get fined? No. He let a race start at the wrong distance. Did he get fined? No. He fined Frank Gabriel $2,000 for something he had absolutely nothing to do with. Are we trying to kill the game or grow the game? How can the horsemen's association allow these draconian penalties? You can go 100 miles per hour in a school zone and not get fined $4,000. It's abject craziness."

“Braulio thinks he is untouchable and he also forgets that he was once a broke horse trainer,” Contessa said. “He forgot that. There was time when he didn’t have two nickels to rub together. I guess he’s forgotten about those days. On this, the punishment doesn’t fit the crime and I am going to dig my heels in and fight this one.”

PENNSYLVANIA TRACKS PULL BACK CURTAIN--A BIT--ON TAKEOUT RATES

by T.D. Thornton

The Pennsylvania Horse Racing Commission (PHRC) on Tuesday voted to grant Thoroughbred racing dates for 2025 that will feature 150 programs at Parx, 105 at Penn National, and 76 at Presque Isle Downs.

Prior to the vote on the dates, however, executives from each track were asked to do something rarely required by racing commissions in this country: Principals from each venue were requested to explain the rationale behind the 2025 takeout rates that accompanied each licensee's dates request.

Takeout rates, the per-bet pricing structure that tracks and states impose upon wagers, are the bane of horseplayers because they are akin to a tax on betting. But takeout rates also provide the financial backbone the sport derives from the pari-mutuel process, because the money generated that way goes, in part, to pay for purses and to keep tracks operational and regulated.

Yet price-conscious horseplayers for decades have lamented not only how high some of the takeouts have risen, but also how notoriously difficult it is to find comprehensive lists of those rates so that bettors can either comparison-shop, or, at the very least, know how much money will be removed from the pools prior to the calculation of winning prices.

Pat Cummings, an industry expert whose advocacy for more transparent takeout rates has been featured in TDN on numerous occasions over the years, wrote in 2020 that horseplayers have long been frustrated at how "a single source of updated takeout rates for bets across all tracks was unavailable, and [how] sourcing the exact rates was nearly impossible."

When TDN touched base with Cummings via email Tuesday to see if that situation had improved, Cummings wrote back that, lamentably, there is still "not a single source for the industry which keeps up with this information routinely."

Against that backdrop, even though the explanations at the Nov. 26 PHRC meeting amounted to only brief remarks required before a vote on licensure, they provided a welcome trickle of information for horseplayers who are used to being kept in the dark about how tracks come up with their takeouts.

This is what Pennsylvania's track operators had to say about their rates for 2025, listed in the order that each made their presentations. (Bear in mind that the commission had asked the executives in advance to prepare their remarks, so no one was caught unaware of this discussion).

Eric Johnston, director of racing operations at Penn National, where takeout rates for 2025 will be 17% win-place-show; 20% exactas, doubles, Jackpot Pick 6 and Jackpot Pentafecta; 31% trifectas, twin trifectas; 30% superfectas and Pick 6; 25% Pick 3, 4 and 5.

“Ours are comparable with those around the country. The one thing that you do see is a little high is the trifecta wagers, which come in at 31%. And in the grand scheme of things, it doesn't seem like it's that outrageous when you consider the history of racing over the years in Pennsylvania,” which, Johnston added, has transitioned from an era of robust on-track betting to being more simulcast-wager driven.

“The business has changed. Of the live wagering, what's bet on the Penn National card every day is less than 10% of the total handle. So this money, these takeout rates, are one of the things that keep us out there. There's a lot of simulcast sites, a lot of computer wagers who bet on us because of those rates. If we start cutting those, we will become less valuable.

“We're certainly not getting rich off what [is being bet] there, but it's all part of the bigger story. I mean, the business has changed. The higher takeouts are along with the pools that have the highest payout, so it's not as noticeable. But it's not something that, you, know, it's not worth losing our outlets to lower those rates.”

Matthew Ennis, the director of racing at Presque Isle, where takeout rates for 2025 will be 17% win-place-show; 20% exactas, doubles; 25% trifectas, superfectas; 23% Pick 3 and 4; 15% Pick 5.

“Just looking at everything competitively, where we stand, compared to my parent company at Churchill Downs [Incorporated], I do feel that Presque Isle Downs has in place a takeout structure on our wagering options that serves the dual purpose of attracting the pari-mutuel dollar and generating the revenue needed to guarantee quality race cards and field sizes.

“I don't feel as if our wagering structure is out of line in any manner. It's very competitive. We look at providing takeout options that are appealing to players in relation to takeouts on wagering menus offered by other tracks. And although I felt that our takeout rates do not tell the whole story of how players choose to wager their dollars, having the player-friendly takeout structure is beneficial in our process of generating larger handles at Presque Isle...

“Of course, I have the protocol to follow with my corporate team at Churchill Downs, and abide by the ranges that they give.”

Joe Wilson, chief operating officer at Parx, where takeout rates for 2025 will be 17% win-place-show; 20% exactas, doubles; 25% trifectas, superfectas, Pick 3, 4 and 6; 15% Pick 5.

“Up until close to five years ago, our takeouts were 17% on win/pace/show; 20% exactas, doubles; 26% on 'pick' bets, and 30% on tris and supers.

“Jan. 1, 2020, we reduced our takeout to 17%, 20% and 25%. So the tris and supers went from 30% to 25%; the 'pick' bets went from 26% to 25%. And a couple of years ago we added our Philly Big Five, and that's at 15%.

“And it's amazing to me to where I still see people commenting on social media that Parx should lower their takeout, when in fact we lowered takeout five years ago.

“Our blend [of takeout rates] right now is at 19.8%, [compared to neighboring Maryland tracks] at 21.25%. So we're [approximately] 1.5 points lower than Maryland. We're even with Delaware, and we're even with Monmouth Park. So we are as competitive as anybody in the area.

“The other thing, if you were to lower your takeout too much--remember our signal goes out worldwide--and if you were to have a drastically reduced takeout, [importers] basically aren't going to promote your signal, because it's not [financially] in their best interest.”

HOW I GOT HOOKED ON RACING: ANNISE MONTPLAISIR AND TOM AMOSS

How did we get hooked on this sport? We all have stories about how our love affair developed and blossomed. The TDN will be reaching out to numerous notable people in the industry to get their stories to find out how they got hooked and stayed hooked on the sport.

Annise Montplaisir | courtesy Annise Montplaisir

Annise Montplaisir, Executive Director, Amplify

I became hooked on racing when I was 12 years old, after watching the 2007 movie “Ruffian.” I already loved horses and was avidly involved in the 4-H horse project, but growing up on the ND/MN border, I had had almost no exposure to racing before seeing that movie. I was fascinated by Ruffian's racing career, the story of the people around her, and her drive to win. I became obsessed with reading racing books, and told my parents I was going to work in the Thoroughbred industry someday.

That conviction was solidified when just a few months later, my mom planned a surprise 13th birthday party for me at the North Dakota Horse Park, the small racetrack near my childhood home.

The track executive director at the time made me feel so special. She took my friends, my mom, and me to the starting gate for the beginning of a race, gave us a tour of the stable area, and introduced us to the track's mascot, an OTTB named Barracuda Boy. These were such simple things, but they made me feel part of something big and important.

The final race of the day was for $5,000 claimers for a purse of $2,800. The skies darkened and it started pouring rain, which somehow added to my excitement. I insisted on standing in the rain right at the finish line with my friends, and we went berserk cheering for two geldings, Dr Ty and Fargo Time, as they battled down the stretch to a photo finish. It might as well have been the Kentucky Derby, we were so thrilled.

Who would have ever thought that years down the road, my entire career would be devoted to introducing youth to the Thoroughbred industry. I'd say that 13-year-old me would think that's pretty cool.

Tom Amoss | Sarah Andrew

Tom Amoss, trainer & T.V. commentator

I went to the same school as Al Stall Jr., whose father was the chairman of the Louisiana Racing commission. We went to Isidore Newman, which is where the Manning brothers all went. We both graduated from there and we roomed together our freshman year at LSU. I became fast friends with Al and one of his interests was handicapping the races. I remember one day he asked me if I wanted to go to the track with his dad. I went on a whim and I liked it.

At the time, my oldest brother was a reporter for the paper here in New Orleans and he connected me with one of the sports writers who really understood racing. That guy brought me to the track at the Fair Grounds and really started to teach me what to look for and what to see when you're handicapping. I fell in love with handicapping from that time on. The idea of having this puzzle in front of you and how it's going to play out and then doing it and being right. You couldn't beat that. I really enjoyed that a lot. It was to the point where I was getting home from school and I got off the street car one stop after the stop for my house. That was because at that stop they had a newsstand that sold the Racing Form. I would get that day's Form even though the races were two-thirds over. I'd bring it back to the house. My parents would say you have to do your homework before dinner. I didn't do any homework. I just pulled out the Form and started handicapping the races.

Racing was so popular in New Orleans in the '70s that when the nightly news came on they would go over the results at the Fair Grounds. I had already done my handicapping and I could see how I did against the actual results. I started reading some books about handicapping. By the time I was in ninth grade, I was fluent when it came to reading the Form and I really enjoyed doing it.

It was about that time and I was spending the night at Al's house and he said his dad had some horses and they were going to go out and watch them train. He said it was an early morning, but asked if I wanted to come out with them. I said sure. At that point, I just thought they put these horses in the gate and the fastest one won. When I was introduced to the backside that day, it was like taking your favorite Broadway play, which for me is "Phantom of the Opera," and then getting to go back stage to see how it all worked. When I had that visit to the track, not only was I amazed at the details but it was then that I decided what I wanted to do. During summer breaks from college I worked alongside with Al at the track in Shreveport.

I got my degree in business, but never had so much as one interview. I went straight to the racetrack. I called it my graduate school. I wanted to learn and do different jobs to feel comfortable with how everything worked. When I went out on my own in 1987, I knew I could train any horse. To be a good horse trainer, you need to be real confident to the point of maybe being arrogant when it came to your abilities. That's when I started and when I did, it was me versus the world. I was breaking into a business that was closed off to a lot of people and there was a lot of nepotism. I was definitely the outsider. Nobody in my family knew anything about racing. Fortunately, I got a few lucky breaks and I started rolling.

Owner and breeder Everett Dobson discusses the upcoming changing of the guard as he is set to become the next Chairman of The Jockey Club

OLD FRIENDS FUNDRAISER BEGINS NOV. 27

Old Friends' HayRaiser fundraiser kicks off Wednesday, Nov. 27 and continues through Tuesday, Dec. 3.

The campaign is aimed to raise funds to support the organization's herd of over 270 horses which requires in excess of 400 round bales to get through winter.

"The Thanksgiving season is a perfect time to remember all of our retired Thoroughbred athletes at Old Friends," said John Nicholson, President and CEO of Old Friends. "They have given so much and now it's our turn to give to them. Our ability to care for over 270 horses every day, year round, is dependent upon the generous support of those who have a special appreciation for these horses and all that they have done."

This year's HayRaiser fundraiser is even more important to the organization given the dry conditions facing Scott County, Kentucky.

"We've experienced the second driest October on record in the last 130 years," said an Old Friend release. "This was great for enjoying the outdoors and the Keeneland Fall race meet, but not so great for our paddocks, as we had to start supplementing our Thoroughbred retirees' forage with hay sooner than planned."

WEDNESDAY'S RACING INSIGHTS: BAFFERT RETURNS TO CHURCHILL WITH $3.2M BARNES

Barnes | Fasig-Tipton

7th-CD, $120K, Msw, 2yo, 5 1/2f, 3:55 p.m. ET.

The debuting $3.2-million Fasig-Tipton Saratoga graduate Barnes (c, 2, Into Mischief--All American Dream, by American Pharoah) is set to become the first starter at Churchill Downs for Hall of Famer Bob Baffert since the lifting of his well-documented, corporation-imposed three-year suspension. Owned by Zedan Racing Stables, Barnes worked five furlongs in 1:00 2/5 (2/8) at Baffert's Santa Anita base Nov. 20 before heading to Louisville. His third dam is MGISW Dream Supreme (Seeking the Gold), responsible for GISW Majestic Warrior (A.P. Indy). The Into Mischief x Empire Maker cross is responsible for promoted GI Kentucky Derby winner Mandaloun and G1 Dubai World Cup hero Laurel River. TJCIS PPS
